Simone Kennedy's work occupies a space between memory, emotion and the uncanny. Working across painting, sculpture and literary fragments, Kennedy transforms the intimate and the psychological into compositions that are both profoundly personal and universally resonant. Her practice emerges from a deep investigation into the inter-subjective bonds between mother and child, the echoes of inherited experience, and the ways that human resilience, attachment, and memory shape identity across generations.

In Silent Night, Kennedy invited participants to reflect on their earliest relationships and personal histories. The responses — intimate, sometimes fragmented — became the foundation for a series of paintings exploring attachment, separation, and the traces of inherited experience. Each work is a meditation on the complexity of human emotion, rendered in forms that are at once surreal, abstract, and uncannily familiar.

The series presents a collection of moments suspended between the tangible and the psychological, revealing the extraordinary within the ordinary. Through layered abstraction, symbolic reference, and subtle psychological nuance, Kennedy's work offers collectors not only visual refinement but an enduring emotional and conceptual depth — a rare opportunity to engage with contemporary art that lingers in the imagination long after the gaze has passed.
